THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY

VOL. LXVIII. NO. 2. FEBRUARY, 1914 NEW SERIES VOL. 5. No. 11

A TIMELY WORD

A writer in The Advance has uncovered a truth which just now needs to be put forward into the light. We quote "No doubt there has been a real serious need of a better polity and more up-to-date business methods in conducting our church business, but the great need of the hour is and has been for years, the deep earnest, revival spirit in our churches." Spiritual quickening expressed in intelligent and zealous action to win souls for Christ, to make the church the most vital and practical institution in the community where it is located, is the need of the hour. Some one has said that the church is not God's field but His force. So the true church is. It is the force, agency, army which He uses, or would use if the church were loyal and militant, to bless the community, promote peace, restrain sin and make the house of God the place of joyful and worshipful convocation for all the people. When the local church is thus imbued with the spirit of Christ and practices the presence of God, youth, manhood and old age alike love the courts of God's house. We believe in orderly procedure, a practical polity, the apportionment, the Commission on Missions, the most careful supervision of our National Societies, and that all these things should enlist the attention and secure the energetic efforts of all our ministers and churches, but we cannot afford to lose sight of the fact that these, to be efficient and permanent, must be the fruit of the spirit and not the whirr of machinery. Our work must not be merely mechanical but spiritual. Our hearts must be in it. We must have the joy of worship, the gladness of song and the comfort of prayer. We must have love for souls and strive to win men to our Master by the devotion of His life and the sacrifice of His Cross. The letter killeth, the spirit maketh alive. In our denominational work, in its great enterprises of home and foreign missions, we might plod on and do things with something of strife and jealousy and at cross purposes, if we were working in our own strength and from force of habit, but if we were filled with the spirit of the Master and had the joy of the Lord for our strength, our progress would be irresistible, and the growth of the Kingdom would be most rapid and secure. Let us not forget the truth "Without me ye can do nothing."

THE CONGREGATIONAL HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Office: 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Hubert C. Herring, D.D., General Secretary; Rev. Herman F. Swartz, Associate Secretary; Rev. Reuben L. Breed, Assistant Secretary; Miss Miriam L. Woodberry, Secretary Woman's Department.

To Home Mission Pastors: Can you push on the conferences of ministers called by the Commission on Evangelism for February 10? Make the day one of power and the period ending at Easter a great time of ingathering.

Assistant Treasurer James T. Brinckerhoff terminated his official relationship with the Society with the closing of the year 1913. Mr. Brinckerhoff has been led to this action only because of severe impairment of his health.

The loyalty of this faithful servant of the churches has been constantly demonstrated during his long lifetime of service in the Treasury Department; and now, in these latter days, a new and tender evidence of his confidence in the Society is found in his turning over to it his entire estate as a Conditional Gift, under an agreement whereby he shall enjoy a substantial annuity to the end of his pilgrimage, and also whereby a similar provision is made for one of his kindred. If, when these conditions are fulfilled there shall be an unexpected residue, it shall go into the current funds of the Society for the furtherance of its work.

Not only do we profoundly appreciate this manifestation of Mr. Brinckerhoff's love for the Society, but we realize that this action of one who so thoroughly knows the financial processes of our organization constitutes a recommendation of our Conditional Gift plan worthy of the favorable consideration of our friends everywhere.

We ask for the "Answers" appearing in the latter part of our section this month far more than a cursory reading. The home missionary's reading matter is of vital importance to his permanent usefulness. So many of these men are serving in isolated locations that they are all the more dependent on periodicals and books for mental food and stimulus. Friends who are not themselves in this service frequently make to us one or the other of two suggestions regarding reading material for missionaries.

The first is that we ask our supporters to send in books which they are no longer using to be forwarded to the scattered missionaries. The plan is good, but it is not as good as it sounds for this reason: Few ever send in any really good books. We never get a Hastings' Bible Dictionary, or a latest encyclopedia, or the New Standard Dictionary, or even Clark's Theology or Fisher's Church History. We do get plenty of books that sell for sixty-eight cents when new, and also volumes of sermons originally read by the dear pastor who composed them, and since read by no one, but which have been purchased because the pastor was loved and honored. In short, the great majority of books which our contributors do not consider worth keeping, we do not deem worth recommending to consume the precious time of the missionary pastor. A gentleman in Brooklyn has sent us some real money, with instructions to buy several high-grade libraries for missionaries and send them on. Within two years, in this way, we have purchased several hundred volumes from The Pilgrim Press.

The second suggestion is that the commissioned men be encouraged to make some money "on the side" for library purposes. Several ways are mentioned, the most frequent being small farming. Experience shows that while a small amount of such extraneous interest may not be harmful to a man's best usefulness, we believe on the whole the churches could rather afford to give the books and periodicals than to have the energies of the missionary pastor thus divided. Farming, in particular, is difficult, inasmuch as it requires a permanence of residence not generally compatible with the mobility of missionary service. The Society has long been disposed to frown upon the combination of missionary service and "homesteading." The "two-master" business is always weak.

The pastors and churches are now making up their figures for the Year-Book. Brethren, beloved, we request you please to note two essential features of your last year's work: First, how many members did you add, especially on confession? Second, how much did you, and how much did the church, give for denominational benevolences? We find that these two items furnish the most reliable gauges of success.

Miss Woodberry is just completing a long and severe itinerary covering about eight thousand miles in the Southwest, and lasting three and a half months.

Dr. Herring will spend February with the deputation of the Neglected Fields Survey, going from the Middle West to the Pacific Coast. This will engage him until nearly the close of his period of service with the Home Missionary Society.

Mr. Breed will go from the midwinter meeting in Chicago into the Northern country for a week or ten days. He will then join the Laymen's Missionary team working in western New York for the first half of February.

Mr. Swartz will remain near the New York office during the month, having general oversight of the work at the focus as well as meeting many appointmens in near-by districts.

Pending the election of a Treasurer, will all donors please send their contributions to Mr. Ernest Adams, Cashier.

CARRYING THE GOSPEL ON A MOTORCYCLE

By Rev. Norman R. Curtis, Brighton, Colo.

NORTH of the city of Denver, nestling at the foot of the snow-capped Rockies, lies the beautiful valley of the South Platte, which with its fertile ranches and fruitful gardens forms one of the finest agricultural districts of our land.

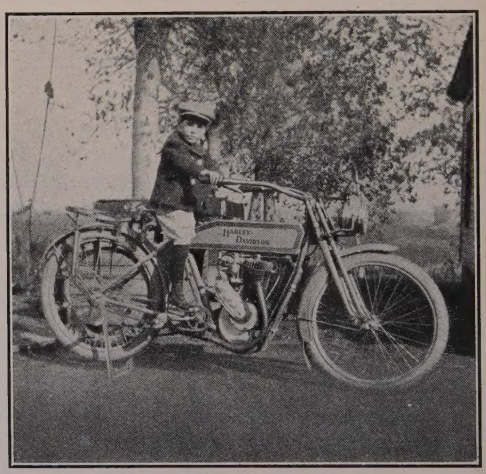
THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY of August, 1912, under the caption, "The Passing of the Horse," told of the parish in this valley with its seven preaching points and scattered constituents, and something of the installation of the new motorcycle which came into active field service a little more than one year ago—the gift of The Congregational Home Missionary Society and the Denver City Mission Society. This motorcycle has proven to be a real missionary agency.

Permit me to illustrate. Recently we received word, early in the morning, of the death of the treasurer of our Henderson church in a Denver hospital, where she had gone for a serious operation. That day the motorcycle covered forty-two miles, carrying consolation to the grief-stricken family and arranging for the funeral. During the same day the pastor preached to fifty aged men and women at the Denver County Farm, and in addition had the joyful experience of presenting the bereft husband to "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world." Two weeks later he was baptized—that fine, stalwart man—and received into the fellowship of the Henderson church.

This great parish virtually lies at the very threshold of the city of Denver. Though its center is ten miles from Denver's post office, we find we have parishioners living within three miles of the city limits.

The three churches—Platte Valley, Henderson, and Rose Hill—united in the call of a pastor, with the Denver County Farm as an additional preaching station. Soon after we were settled in the pastorate there came a call from the northwest seven miles to an abandoned Methodist church with a large community chapel, situated in the heart of a wealthy agricultural district, where we had already a partially organized Congregational church. We arranged to give these people three Sunday afternoon services per month, thus creating our fifth preaching station.

Eight months later there came another urgent call from an unchurched region nine miles to the north of us, where, after ten days' evangelistic mission in the public school building, we organized a Sunday-school, together with a church of ten members—Darlowe Congregational Church—with a monthly preaching service on Sunday afternoon, which made station number six.



FRANCIS CURTIS AND THE MOTORCYCLE.

Simultaneously with this there came a call from the Ebert school district, four miles to the south of Rose Hill, and eleven miles from the parsonage, where a group of Christian people desired help. Here, within one mile of the limits of the city of Denver we organized a promising Sunday-school as a branch of Rose Hill church, giving us seven preaching points and a parish of approximately 400 square miles. Ebert Mission was maintained with an occasional service until the school building was sold, when it seemed desirable to prove our denominational comity by giving the field to the Presbyterian church of Aurora, a Denver suburb only two miles distant.

After much effort last year we were fortunate in securing a pastor for our Wesley Chapel. How the Methodist brethren like that splendid name! However, it is now Wesley Congregational Church.

We have now a growing ministry at the Denver County Farm, where there are 172 inmates, of whom approximately fifty-five per cent. are Protestant. Among them are many earnest, intelligent Christians. Here we maintain a weekly preaching service, supplemented by a biweekly Bible class conducted by members of Henderson church.

The numerous Italian gardeners near us are looking to us for help, and we hope as the way may open to do something for them also.

Does it pay? One of our Oregon workers tells how in the course of a bargain for a foxhound the seller was giving the pedigree of the hound, when the buyer, an old darkey, said, "I don't care nuthin' 'bout that; show me the fox skins." The people who invest money in any given line of work want to see some of the fruits of their investment.

Allow me to introduce to you Ben of our parish. The winter of 1910-'11 Ben was singing in our choir. He was a clean, moral man of good habits, but he possessed an irascible temper. He had been brought up and baptized in the Church of England. Once I said to him privately at the close of an evening service, "Ben, we hope soon to see you declare yourself for the Lord." As a result he remained away from service, and soon left the parish after a serious outbreak against his employer, a godly churchman. The next time I saw Ben he was in a Denver hospital, confined to his bed through a serious accident. His face was as black as his dark hair, and the doctor held out no hope for his recovery. "Ben," I said, "before you go, for the doctor says you cannot live, would you like to come to the Saviour?" "That I would, Mr. Curtis," he replied. "Then," I said, "suppose you tell Him, while I bow my head, that for life or death you consecrate yourself to Him." What a moment that was as poor Ben poured out his heart to God. After commending him to the heavenly Father I said good-bye. One year later I had the joy of receiving him into the fellowship of the church, where his wife was already a member, and where he had once spurned the Lord. So again we hear his excellent voice in the choir, and look upon the beaming face of a new Ben.

DOINGS AT DOOLEY

By Rev. Frank E. Henry

THIS is the first pioneer work I have done on my own account, and I feel it to be a test of my adaptability to new conditions. I reached Dooley (just three weeks old) at eleven o'clock in the morning, and found that nobody took the paper I had my notice in—The Dooley Sun—printed twenty miles away; also that the placard I had left ten days before had not been put up. I was not going home without a service, so I determined to go out into the highway and compel them to come in, since my invitation, like that in the parable, had produced no result. I found a man who was shingling his roof, and urged him to come. He assured me he would do so as soon as he had finished. Next I saw a barber shaving a customer, and gave both an invitation. In another tent a man was "shingling" his mate's hair. They declined, saying they had nothing but overalls to wear. "It's to be an overall crowd," I assured them, and they at once decided to come. A farmer and his son drove in to make some purchases, and I asked them if they would come to church upstairs. They said they would as soon as their purchases were made, and the clerks promised to attend when the bill of goods was sold. A carpenter stopped his bench work, and the banker offered to arrange some chairs in the upper room over the store. A painter was asked to attend, but declined. "I don't believe in churches anyway," he said. Another man thought it was too near the dinner hour; it was half past eleven by this time. I told him we would have only a half-hour service, and he agreed to come. Another refused because he was not dressed up. The preacher took off his coat saying, "I'll go to church in my shirt sleeves if you will"; and he assured me that he would be there. But nobody would start, and I had to make the rounds again and stir up the laggards. One of the men had a camera. I told him to bring it along and take a picture of the first church service in Dooley. He did so. I went back to my painter. "Come on," I urged, "you are the last man, make it unanimous." But he persisted in his refusal. At last we got together—every man in the new town but one—seventeen all told. There were only four women on the town site, the cooks and waitresses. They were breathless with dinner preparations, and failed to appear; so we had a "stag party" as one of the men remarked.

VIEW OF PLENTYWOOD, MONTANA

Some sat on office chairs and some on boxes; some on a folding bed and some on the "pew"—a plank on two nail kegs. Then the preacher in his shirt sleeves, rector-like, began. There were no hymn books, so we tried to sing the Doxology. We lost the tune, but made a new one as we went along. No one had a Bible, not even the preacher, accustomed to pulpit copies. He felt safe in repeating the Twenty-third Psalm, and actually got through without a mistake. Then came the sermon. He had decided to speak on Peter, but discovered to his dismay that the notes hastily selected were on John and Nicodemus. But Peter was never easily suppressed, and the sermon turned out to be about the man of rock after all.

After the prayer we all descended from the upper room, feeling as though we had been in the Divine Presence. Then we all "looked pleasant" while the barber snapped his machine. Afterward we assembled at the cook shack for dinner, and the parson offered a prayer—the first for weeks, if ever before, at that table.

As the minister was saying good-bye one young man slipped two quarters into my hand. "You forgot the collection." So I had. "Keep it and jingle it in a hat, and see what you can get for the C. H. M. S." I found out later that this young man was a Methodist. He showed me his Bible in his tent saying, "You might have had it for the service." A few days later a check followed for several times the amount of the "four bits" tendered by the young English Wesleyan.

Now for a word about the new schoolhouse appointment. Two weeks ago I stopped by chance at a big house five miles from Plentywood. It was an unusual sight among homesteaders' shacks. I found a Bohemian with seven children. He needed the house. I learned that a new Sunday-school had been organized a few weeks before. I told him I would be glad to stop on my way home from Dooley and preach for them the first Sunday in September, and asked them to tell every one at Sunday-school of the service. They promised, and this is what they accomplished. Though late in arriving (it was twenty minutes of four instead of three when we began), they made up for it in enthusiasm and numbers. The little schoolhouse had several rows of seats, and some of them were three deep with attentive listeners, two sitting in each seat, with the babies on the desks. When I got up from my seat another took it. Many said it was the first religious service they had attended since coming out three years before. Children nine years old had never been in Sunday-school before. And they were not poor. This valley is a great basin, with yellow wheat stubble and brown flax making a checkerboard. I looked down from the ridge and counted fourteen houses in sight, and each was on a 320-acre farm. No, they are not poor, though this year was a dry one and hard on them. Three years from nothing to independence! And there were blue serge suits, pleated shirt bosoms, and patent leather shoes! It happened that there were no automobiles out, but dozens of farmers around here have them.

They voted to ask the preacher to come again, and then asked, "How much must we pay you?" "Pay," I said, "why, I didn't come out here for pay." "Well, the first question they ask will be 'how much,'" the chairman said. "Tell them the C. H. M. S. pays my salary, but that if they appreciate the Society's interest, take up a collection for it, and after six months we will start a church. Then you can pay the preacher if you wish."

I reached home in time for evening service. Another good crowd of about fifty. A lawyer who has been in attendance for some time told me that formerly never more than a dozen or fifteen got out. Others say the same. So I am encouraged, but not pleased and far from satisfied. I want every seat filled and then some; and by Christmas we will have it so.

After service I asked them to give me a call if they wanted me to come back October 1, to ratify the appointment. The mayor, who presided, told me they made it unanimous, with a rising vote. A committee of ladies was appointed to look after the enlargement of the parsonage. The basement is now in the hands of the plasterers, and soon will be as good a room as the upper floor. They have clubs and bells, gloves and bag and mat. This is the beginning of a fine little "gym."

A COMMUNITY CHURCH IN THE ANTHRACITE COUNTRY

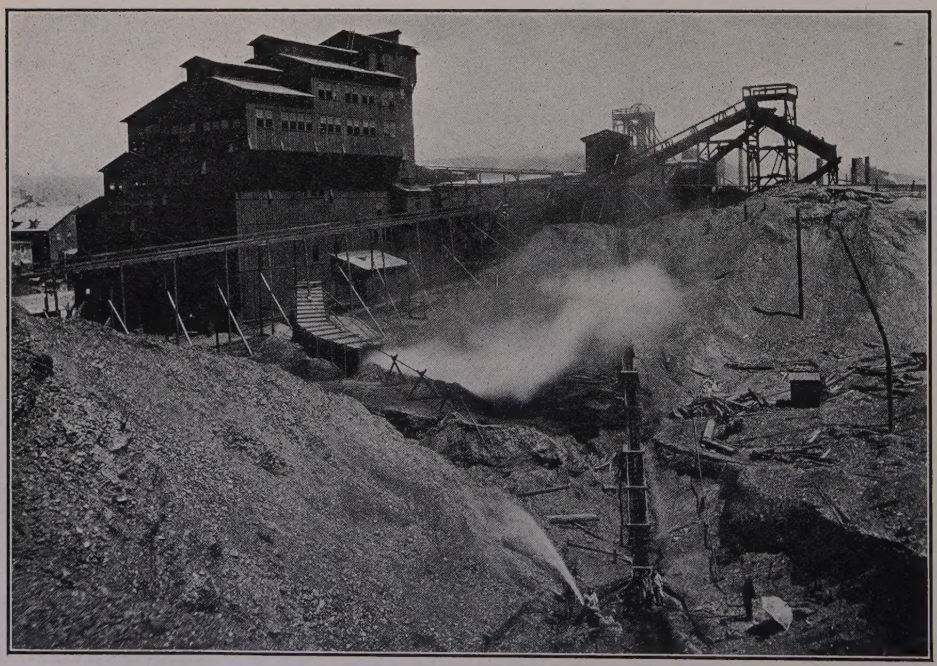
THE "Plymouth Rock" on which this church stands is composed of anthracite coal. The coal mining communities need the personal and social ministrations of the Gospel as do scarcely any other parts of our widely-diversified country. Portions of the following personal letters were read, simply as picturesque material, in the hearing of an Eastern gentleman, who, knowing the coal country, instantly and unexpectedly volunteered his check for fifty dollars toward the enterprise. It is a live one.

Plymouth, Pa., September 26, 1913.

DEAR BROTHER:

I am writing you for some advice in matters pertaining to the Elm Congregational Church, of Plymouth, Pennsylvania. We have in the past been dealt with generously by you, and let me add that we appreciate your kindness.

Here is what is bothering me: We have a class of young men in our church numbering close to thirty-five, and another class, of younger boys, numbering, possibly, twenty-five, and a lot more who are younger.



BREAKER AND WASHERY, PLYMOUTH, PA.

OXYGEN HELMETS USED IN RESCUING VICTIMS OF GAS EXPLOSIONS

They are hard to hold and handle, but they will be the men of to-morrow. The majority of these boys are members of the church, and they know what they ought to do, but they meet many temptations in this town—no doubt as bad a town morally as can be found on the American continent. The sheriff raided a saloon two weeks ago, on Sunday evening, and found in it, drinking, the president of our council, another councilman, a justice of the peace, and a policeman on duty behind the bar serving drinks. A pretty tough town to raise boys in, isn't it?

One of our boys, who lately joined the church, went down town recently, and for the want of any other place to go went into a pool room, where they enticed him to gamble. He lost four dollars before he came away. Now that boy is the only support of his father and mother, his father being a consumptive and unable to work. He said to me, "If we had some place to meet, we wouldn't think of going into such places as pool rooms."

A number of the boys have gone to work to excavate the balance of the basement of our church, and they are working nights after laboring hard in the mines and breakers all day. With a faith in Providence that some way will be provided for them to have a reading room and a place to congregate on the long winter evenings, they are excavating for a room about 30 by 30 feet. Our church is already heavily burdened, and I can see no way in which it can help the boys to any great extent. I can think of at least eight of these boys who are the main support at home. One of them, fifteen years old, is keeping his widowed mother, and she is scarcely able to do the housework. A number of them have drunken fathers, and if it were not for the boys, the mothers and sisters in many cases would be in actual want.

Faithfully yours,

A. R. Fisk.

Plymouth, Pa., October 18, 1913.

Dear Brother:

I arrived home from our Wyoming Association to-day at noon, and as usual found much that required immediate attention.

While I was away one of our deacons found a family down in the slums, living in the direst poverty in a couple of rooms over a stable. He instantly communicated with the Brotherhood, and six or eight men, members of one of our praying bands, were sent there Wednesday night. They found that when the husband worked he made plenty of money, but alcohol ruled in that home. They got the man and his wife on their knees before God, and both professed conversion. They threw out the beer bottles, smashing the full ones, and they are now trying "the more excellent way." It will mean a hard struggle for both pastor and people to keep these poor folks going, for all the hounds of hell will try to drive them back to their former state. They tell me that in this home there is a boy who is delicate. He will be greatly benefited by our boys' parlor, as my dear friend, Dr. Shelton, of Plymouth Church, Scranton, has promised to come down and help start a class in physical culture.

Another thing: Our girls go to the factory just as soon as they are big enough. Age makes no difference. They stay at such work until the day before they are married, and they only get married because they think it will mean escape from this type of drudgery. But these girls can scarcely boil water without burning it. They know absolutely nothing about cooking or housework. It seems to me that the church ought to meet these conditions and try to change them. A class in domestic science for girls would interest them and fit them for home makers, as well as have a great bearing on their eternal destiny.

As to the work we have in mind now: The room will be about 30 by 30, with a cement floor. Part of this will be used for a small kitchen for the girls' domestic science class. It will also be used by the Ladies' Aid for suppers, etc. I have an idea that we could be nicely fixed up for about $175. Remember this is only a guess. We will have in the room dumbbells and Indian clubs, a punching bag, games of dominoes and checkers, reading matter, and possibly horizontal bars. The plan is to let some of these little fellows who have worked all day in the dust of the coal breaker, or driven mules in the musty, gassy air of the inside of the mine, have a chance to clear their lungs and take the "Charlie" off their backs and the load off their hearts.

Faithfully yours,

A. R. Fisk.

CONFERENCE OF HOME MISSIONARY WORKERS

KANSAS CITY, OCTOBER 20-22, 1913

MISSIONARIES on the foreign field are accustomed to convene and confer about their common duties, opportunities, methods, and outlook. Hitherto the missionaries on the home field have not. With the belief that such a conference would be profitable, the home missionary workers of Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Texas met for a two-days' session immediately preceding the National Council. Thirty-six men came, not to complain of unpaid salaries, disheartening indifference, and the dismal outlook because of the season's drought, but to say why they loved the home missionary field, to tell of the unique place it now holds in the broad field of Christian service, to count the things necessary to meet the present demands, to urge that Home Missions be given like place in the thought of the church with foreign missions, and to make apparent the necessity of providing a permanent expert service for many of the fields which are arising in the new conditions of the church.

The hammer to crack the basket of home missionary nuts, otherwise problems, has usually been in the hands of others than those familiar by actual experience with the home missionary parish. In much of the discussion of the religious press a foreign accent and suggestion of patronage are present. There is caste in the common phrase—"our missionaries." The home missionary does not know why he should be "possessed," and would prefer that the pronoun be dropped. The oversight of Home Missions is sometimes committed to those with slight experience with such parishes. Gratefully acknowledging the splendid work of nation-leavening as hitherto conducted, the home missionary now begins to feel that some slight changes may prove beneficial, and he hopes the new Board of Missions may not overlook them.

The program in its five sessions considered the place of the missionary as a pioneer and layer of foundations; the small church, the chief cornerstone of the Kingdom; the human appeal for a human ministry; the rural church in new environment; the new urban life; why Jesus wept over the city; why the church rather than the settlement in the city slum; duties to the dependent and delinquent classes; the need of the restoration of the parish, both rural and urban, in the interests of adequate equipment, economy of administration, and efficiency of service; the labor of the home missionary in resuscitating the decadent church; how contrasts now existing between home and foreign missionaries may be eliminated; the social conditions inimical to character; the present outlook of Home Missions; the vicarious life the times call for.

The Conference proved as unique in effect as in design. A truer grasp of the situation, a larger degree of zeal for real service, closer fellowship, keener sympathy, and more earnest prayer have not been manifest in any conference of Christian workers I have attended. The presentation of the new rural conditions and the new duties which they teach would honor the pages of any publication, and this may be said of almost all of the addresses.

Thoroughly convinced that the home missionary church is permanently needed, the Conference presented an overture to the National Council, through Dr. Herring, asking that consideration be given to the following:

A. That methods and means be provided for a larger human ministry, as the present proportion between preaching and the efforts to minister to other needs does not appear to correspond to the proportion these two had in the life of our Lord.

B. That new conditions, unique and individual in both urban and rural life, demand permanent expert service, and that the church should provide this as soon as may be.

C. That so far as possible the distinction between home and foreign be allowed to disappear in the missionary program of the church, and that the claims of this work be presented to the young men and women of our colleges and seminaries as a life work.

The Conference voted to hold a second meeting at a convenient date and place in 1914.

IMPORTANT NEW LEAFLETS

A half dozen or more valuable leaflets have lately been published. A few lines follow to indicate the character of each. All are free upon request.

"The Meaning of Congregationalism." This is an eight-page, clear, and readable account of the genius of our denomination. It will be especially valuable for distribution to companies of people gathered to form a church and disposed to inquire into the character of the Congregational body.

"Twelve Days on Ellis Island." A four-page folder. This consists of several extracts from the reports of our Ellis Island missionary. It is concrete and interesting. Pastors may find good illustrative incidents among the stories.

"American Churches Touching Alien Populations." A thirty-two page booklet. This is a view of the work as seen by a foreign-born pastor, Rev. M. G. Papazian. He answers the question, "How can American churches and pastors be put in touch with the alien population?" The pictures are excellent.

"Helping Immigrant Children." By Assistant Secretary Reuben L. Breed. Written for the younger people, and suitable for circulation in quantities in the Sunday-schools.

"Present Realities in West Tampa, Florida." Well illustrated. Concerning our work for the Cuban-American population of Tampa.

"Six Southern Sundays." Eight pages. Written in Miss Woodberry's best spirit. An attractive glimpse of the types of important missionary obligations to be discharged in the Southeast.

"New Americans and The Congregational Home Missionary Society." Forty pages. In this publication we have a strictly up-to-date presentation of the work conducted by the Society in other languages than English. It is based on the articles appearing in THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY for October and November, 1913. This is the most comprehensive account of our foreign work ever issued.

PRIZE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

RULES

THE Congregational Home Missionary Society will pay three dollars for the winning question and five dollars for the winning answer.

One such award will be made each month, if possible.

The question or answer must be in our hands not later than the 25th of each month.

Answers should not exceed 500 words.

We reserve the right to reject any or all papers submitted any month.

Sign your name and address. We will print the initials only, if you prefer.

Send to H. F. Swartz, 287 Fourth Avenue; New York City.

THE QUESTION

The prize question this month is submitted by Rev. T. D. Henshaw, East Lake, Chattanooga, Tennessee. We have had the pleasure of sending Mr. Henshaw our check for three dollars.

The question submitted by Mr. Henshaw reads as follows:

How can prejudice be removed from the minds of the non-church-going, so that they may be made to see and appreciate the fact that the church fosters no class distinction in its membership, and is not seeking managers, professional men, men of means, etc., more than the poor and humble common people?

THE ANSWERS

The prize answer to the December question has been sent in by Rev. George B. Waldron, of Sanford, Florida, to whom we have awarded five dollars. The question reads as follows:

With our small salaries and large expenses, such as horse hire and railroad fare in getting from one point to another, how are we to get the books, magazines, and papers necessary to keep abreast of the times?

MR. WALDRON'S PLAN

The answer to the question, in brief, is: Co-operation of groups of pastors, aided by the theological seminary, the parcel post, and the home missionary Superintendent.

The theological seminary, or the Christian college, or the public library, is needed to form a collecting and distributing center for the books, magazines, and papers.

The parcel post, under the new regulations in effect January 1, 1914, is the agency for carrying the little library from the distributing center to the group of pastors, and from person to person of the group.

The home missionary Superintendent acts as an agency for assembling the group and for the smooth operation of the plan.

The co-operating pastors—not more than twelve to the group—receives, each man, his mail package, holds it a month, and passes it on to the next in turn.

The plan calls for a number of mail parcels, one for each member of the group, and containing the desired books, magazines, and papers. The container is a light wooden box or case, adapted in size and shape to the proposed literature. It has a cover, hinged or sliding, that can be quickly and firmly fastened according to the requirements of the postal service. The limit of weight for container and contents is twenty pounds, more than enough for the purpose.

On the inner door of the case is a list of the co-operating group, with addresses and the month each is to possess the library. It would be well also to have enclosed a bunch of mailing tags, each addressed with the names of sender and receiver, and arranged in proper order.

The books in one retainer should number probably not more than a half dozen, selected for the needs of the family as well as the pastor. Each person of the group receives one monthly magazine direct from the publisher. He holds it for a month, and then passes it along to the rest of the group when he sends the books. The magazine list on the inner door of the box indicates the full list in its order of first reading. Weekly papers and magazines of more permanent qualities may be passed about like the monthlies.

If each member of the group paid his full share on the literature circulated, it would cost him, say, eight dollars for six books, two dollars for a magazine, and two dollars for postage, a total of twelve dollars for the year, or one dollar per month. With a free circulating library of books he needs to pay but approximately four dollars a year; and for this sum he will have the reading of seventy-two modern books and 144 current magazines —more indeed than he has time to read. If he is still too poor to meet this small payment, let the Home Missionary Society add this library privilege to his salary, for surely the missionary "is worthy of his hire."

(IMPORTANT NOTICE.—Let any commissioned man who would approve something substantially like Mr. Waldron's proposed plan, write to his own state Superintendent. The Congregational Home Missionary Society has been operating a similar plan in six states for about two years.)

REQUESTS A LIST TO WHOM TO SEND BOOKS

I believe that one way to solve this practical question would be to publish a list of those who are in need of books, magazines, and papers. This list should appear in THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY, The Advance, and The Congregationalist. Or, if preferred, all who would like books, etc., should send their names and addresses to the editor of THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY, and he could issue a general appeal for contributions of books and papers.

For several years it was my custom to go through my library annually, and send to various colleges the books I no longer needed. I learned, accidentally, of several pastors who would gladly welcome books and magazines and papers, and it is a real joy to help them. I believe there are many who would gladly contribute books, magazines, and papers to help their brother ministers if they knew where to send such gifts.

EARNING EXTRA MONEY FOR BOOKS

When I was situated in a position similar to that of the brother who propounds the question, I was naturally put to my wit's end to find a solution for problems much the same as he has stated. The salary was too small to provide a respectable living, and books were considered an undreamed of luxury. It became necessary to find some means of supplementing my salary. I learned that the large city dailies had no representative in our district, and upon application I received the appointment as both correspondent and subscription solicitor for our entire territory. This work in no way interfered with my regular pastoral labors but rather was of assistance, for I found it possible to increase my visiting among all classes of people whether or not they were church goers. This stimulated church attendance, won several new friends for myself and members for the church, and that first year supplemented my salary to the amount of $300. I was thus able to purchase the following books and periodicals, and they formed a foundation for a fine, practical library: Hastings' Bible Dictionary, Cruden's Concordance, Fisher's Church History, Clarke's Theology, Revised Version of Old and New Testament, Tarbell's Teachers' Guide, The Congregationalist, and The Expositor. While working on the large papers I became very friendly with the editor of our local paper, and by occasionally favoring him in various ways, he gave me the privilege of reviewing his exchanges each week. From these I started scrapbooks of interesting material, and accumulated a large fund of useful information at practically no cost. Even at present I am following the plan of preserving clippings, and my book expense does not exceed ten dollars a year; yet I manage to keep well informed concerning all current religious and secular events.

GOOD IDEAS

The very fact of the enormous output of books, magazines, and papers makes a first suggestion clear—rigid selection. I have found that it pays to buy more books and fewer papers. We want the three or four denominational papers, general, missionary, and state, but these often come at reduced rates. A good eclectic or weekly review, a subscription for the wife and another for the children complete the list. This may mean about eight dollars per year. Rigid selection of books is admittedly harder. I try, first of all, to exhaust the possibilities of free borrowing—free except for the cost of carriage, perhaps. For many there are public libraries. In some states there is the privilege of a circulating library at the state home missionary office, and for most Associations the opportunity of exchange among the brethren privately.

Many fine books can be secured at less than fifty cents the volume, and they are of such appearance that they make a splendid library. But it is also true that buying some large work will make unnecessary the purchase of many smaller books. The greater expense is more than offset by the wider range of matter included. The Britannica people advertise reading courses based on the Encyclopedia alone, and any minister can work out a reading course in Hastings, and find that the constant use of the set will obviate the purchase of many separate volumes.

Therefore, allowing eight dollars from the salary to go for current periodicals and seven more for books, we have fifteen dollars from the known income for reading matter annually. From the uncertain income, such as fees, we can possibly average ten dollars. The average minister will find this enough to keep him going on solid, helpful works for a long time. Judicious investment will bring good dividends.

PERTINENT PLANS

I should like to suggest three plans that I have found helpful in my twenty-five years of home missionary service.

First. The borrowing of books and religious magazines from older men in the ministry, and especially those occupying the larger fields. In all the years of my service I have never found a man occupying one of our larger churches who had not time to advise me about the wise course to pursue in my study, and who was not pleased to lend me any of his books. I have also discovered that there is a distinct advantage in borrowing books from such a man, because he is usually willing to take the time to tell me the thing that has impressed itself on his mind, and because his annotations on the margins and blank leaves emphasize the strong or weak points of the book.

Second. By getting people who take religious papers and magazines to send them to me after they have finished with them. It has never been my privilege to feel able to subscribe for more than one of our denominational papers, but through the kindness of friends I have been able to read others, and in this way I have kept fairly well in touch with the spirit of our own and other religious bodies.

Third. If possible, get the use of some library. Often my fields have been outside the territory where library books were supposed to go; but I have always found librarians willing to waive their rules and lend whatever books I needed. If a man has access to such a library, he has an almost inexhaustible supply of material for general reading and study. I know this plan is feasible, because I had one field where it was necessary for me to go thirty miles to secure such material, and it was heartily given to me. I have also occasionally made use of the circulating library, which is practical and cheap.

WOMEN WORKERS IN FOREIGN SPEECHES

By Miriam L. Woodberry

IT is more than fifty years now since a prominent man was asked, "Why are you so interested in the battle for higher education for women? Why not keep quiet?" He answered, "When I graduated from Harvard, my sister wrote my oration and made me learn it, and many of the boys would never have stayed in school if their sisters had not followed their studies and prodded them on to victory."

When people have demonstrated their ability for this or that task, it is impossible to minimize their influence very long. Already the position of women in our home missionary work is in the power-wielding department. For generations, the minister's wife, and particularly the home missionary wife, has cast the deciding vote when the church committee is facing a "call". This fact is never printed, but it is known. One minister cheerfully announces, "I am a one-year specimen. I like to move. I like new work. I like the first stitches, but I can always stay three years, because the people become so fond of my wife they won't let her go." More and more the assistant pastor is becoming a pastor's assistant, and nine times out of ten that means that the work which usually falls heavily on the wife of the pastor is recognized and put on feminine shoulders that are to specialize exclusively in the work "that only a woman can do."

The last few years have seen still another decided step. The assistant pastor is being sent all alone to bridge over a crisis. This English wording is generally used—"Miss So-and-So is tactful; she is keen and witty; she is able also. In a short time, these people will be so happy and contented they will unite on a man, and everything will be in good running order." This is true, and Miss So-and-So is being kept on the field. Now committees are beginning to say, "Where can we find the man to follow up this work?" Sometimes the people will not let her go, and more than one rural community in New England has opened an abandoned church, founded a Sunday-school, with children and teachers, launched Boy Scouts, and a Camp-fire Girls' Club, taken full charge of the Fourth of July celebration, and put life into the Village Improvement Society. When you come to think of it, she is a good financial proposition, because she does not have to have a salary large enough to support a wife, and she really does the work of a couple.

In no department is this field so capable of large development as in immigration. If we who represent the old, established churches of the land are dependent upon "her," how much more so is this new little foreign church that is leading thousands of people over the threshold into a new life of thought, equipment, and struggle.

Dr. Schauffler had the vision of America's coming needs, and the graduates of the Schauffler Training School have already illustrated their ability not only to meet but handle the same need. The army already at work ought to be on the hearts and in the prayers of all our constituency, for their work can never be done by us, and it will be blocked, minimized, and weakened, if we do not hold up their hands.

We covet for you an acquaintance not only with them, but with the New America whose door opens to their touch and closes almost automatically in your face, if you call without an escort who is a friend, interpreter, or guide. It is one of these girls, a daughter of Old Poland, who stands practically alone, presiding over a church in a large mining district. During the last long, hard strike, night after night she held the people in check. It was not her responsibility to handle the strike, but by keeping the church open, planning debates, sociables, and entertainments, deeds of violence were prevented, recklessness did not run riot, and when the record of Christian battles is given to the world, her name will appear with the generals.

An obscure little woman in the mill regions—we use the word "obscure" when a person's name is not set up in print—arrived at a home the day after a debauch. During the drunken revel a feather bed had been demolished after having been used as a missile. The feathers were everywhere, sticking to the dirt and filth on floor, wall, and ceiling. On the bed lay a woman suffering with an abscess. Realizing that it would break soon, our worker bathed the woman, created a little order out of chaos, and calmed the excited nerves of the patient by offering a prayer at her bedside. Relief came that moment. The abscess broke, and half an hour later she left, giving thanks that she had been guided to that home. She little knew the next chapter. The woman, as soon as she could walk, ran up and down, telling of her recovery. The maimed, the halt, and the blind came rushing to the missionary's door. Sick babies were laid at her feet, mothers begging her to offer up the magic prayer that conveyed health. In vain she tried to explain; they could not understand; and when a sick baby left on her doorstep died, the people became almost furious. "She would not say the prayer—down with the Christian," sounded from house to house, until we feared a riot. But her faith was equal to the emergency, and strength was given. Her serenity and calmness won victories. It is a big task to which we call these girls, and sometimes I fear we may hear God's voice calling to us and asking questions similar to the question asked of Cain years and years ago. For indifference and neglect are weapons that kill.

One Sunday afternoon in the corner of a large city stood a baby organ. A railroad track near by seemed to have only one mission, and that to transport heavy freight trains loaded with steel rails. A nearby mill was disgorging its workmen. A pastor and his Christian Endeavor Society planned to hold a meeting right there. Every man who had accepted Christ was to stand with his hat off. The crowd gathered. Slowly hats were removed, for the scoffers were nearly within talking distance. Two hundred and fifty men heard the Gospel message that afternoon in five languages, and the message came from the lips of a Schauffler girl. At the organ sat another student of the school. They sang, but not in English. The men were reverential, and courage came to those who were not afraid to show their colors by removing their hats. It seemed a wonderful meeting, although I did not know what was said until evening, when sitting in a Slovak home they translated for me.

Many questions ask themselves these days. They come unbidden. Whose country is this—ours or Christ's? Ours for Christ, perhaps? Ours as long as we hold it for Christ? What share are we taking? Are we doing our part? M. L. W.

The box applications placed this season exceed the number placed during any of the seven preceding years by fifty, and it seems likely we shall not have to write a single family on our list that it has not been possible to secure a box for them. We wish to extend to the ladies of the churches who have made this possible our sincere appreciation of their generous cooperation with this department of our work.

RACE CONSCIOUSNESS

IT was Honorable Andrew D. White in commenting upon the tumults in Russia who said that, in so far, this was a sign of intellectual health. The people who do not think are content. This means stagnation. Sharp conflicts of opinion prove that the conditions are not moribund. When convictions do not clash there is decay. In view of this it is interesting and hopeful to note the differences of view in the recognized leaders of the Negro people. One for example takes counsel of his hopes—the skies are bright; another of his fears—there are threatening clouds; one is an opportunist; another declares this is a time-saving policy that gives his people away; one deprecates agitation; another declares that in the presence of acknowledged injustice and wrongs against the rights of man, silence gives consent. One speaks of privileges, another of the handicaps of caste and its manifold oppressions.

Would it be better if all felt and thought alike? Is it not a hopeful sign that the conflicts of opinion exist and that all should make themselves heard? When some things are tolerable and many are intolerable, those who call heed to the one and those who agitate against the other keep the people thinking, and this is healthy. In evolutionary progress there is a lot of truth in the old Latin proverb "in medio tutissimus ibis." But if all took the middle of the road temporary safety might easily come to mean an acquiescence in evils which the future would find increasingly difficult to overcome. The middle of the road is for those who are led and not for the leaders. One thing is certain, a people that will not insist upon their rights and will not speak for themselves will not long find others to speak for them.

The symposium to which we call especial attention on other pages should be one of many in the organs of the colored people. Attention should be focussed on real conditions —good and bad, the hopeful and the unhopeful; neither to the exclusion of the other. Agitation is a sign of health and it should be active when the disposition and purpose to hinder and not help is evidently growing. The Negro greatly needs the help of those who sympathize with his aspirations, and he needs the positiveness and determined purpose to help himself more than ever.

AN ERROR

THOSE who are careful readers—let us hope "constant readers"—of our A. M. A. section of the "MISSIONARY" noticed that the interesting article upon Grandview Normal Institute was interrupted by an intruding page. It was, of course, an error of the printer after the proof had been duly corrected—always the printer's fault—and truly so this time. We resigned ourselves to the misfortune but we were not reconciled to it. We will not let it happen again, as Mark Twain said when he heard the sermon through without sleeping.

TWENTIETH LINCOLN MEMORIAL SUNDAY

"I would rather make a life than make a living."—Abraham Lincoln.

The Sympathy of Lincoln.

He succeeded in making a life. It was not cast upon the low basis of financial gain or personal luxury or convenience. He made the living for the sake of the life and not the life for the sake of the living. He found a race under the harrow of cruel and despotic slavery. He did not "preach contentment" to that race dwelling in idle luxury himself. He emancipated them from their slavery. He encouraged the passage of amendments to the Constitution of the United States which provided for the citizenship of those who had been so long under the harrow of oppression. He permitted them to enlist in the patriotic army of the nation and offered them opportunity to prove their manhood and their courage. This they did. The race which he emancipated did not disappoint him. His sympathy was natural from the conditions of his life. Born in a two-roomed mountain cabin in Kentucky his early conditions were hard and meager. Moving to Indiana with his parents while a little lad, with them again he plunged into the hardships of frontier life. One often wonders whether Abraham Lincoln could have been what he was to needy and oppressed peoples had he not had these early experiences of hardship, toll and privation.

Lincoln Memorial Sunday has for its object the commemoration of Abraham Lincoln's life. It is the richest heritage that this generation has from the past.

February.

Is the month devoted by the Sunday-schools through all its Sabbaths to the study of the work of the A. M. A. with contributions to its treasury. This Association is pre-eminently an organization that appeals to patriotism. Its great missionary propaganda through hundreds of earnest and devoted men and women in the various fields has for its purpose the establishment of intelligent and loyal citizenship. The Industrial Schools, first introduced into the South by this Association and maintained among both races, among the Indians on the prairie, the Eskimo in Alaska and in the Island Territories of Hawaii and Porto Rico, furnish training for the preparation of efficient and self-supporting citizens. If Lincoln Memorial Sunday had no other reason for its establishment and continued existence its contribution to patriotism would be warrant enough. We too often lose the influence and significance of the lives of great men who have gone before us. There are "foot prints on the sands of time" which we do not take note of.

The Sympathy of the A. M. A.

The sympathy of those who established and maintained the great work of the A. M. A. went out with an earnest longing to complete the work which Abraham Lincoln had begun. "He without us could not be made perfect." The heredity of responsibility and opportunity comes especially in this anniversary. It is hoped that this memorial service may do much to arouse the same earnestness and glow of patriotic enthusiasm and of devotion to this unfinished work that were felt a generation ago.

A new and fresh Lincoln Memorial Concert Exercise, written by a prominent pastor in Connecticut, is prepared for this service. It will be furnished to pastors, superintendents or teachers from any of the offices of the Association. The gifts of the patriotic members of our Sunday-schools have increased from year to year. Last year something like 120,000 loyal young people kept Lincoln Memorial Sunday. Can we not make it 200,000 patriots who keep the day this year?

Envelopes for the collection will also be furnished. The measure of patriotism is generally that which we are willing to sacrifice in behalf of country. How will our body of Sunday-school members size up to this test of loyalty?

WHEN FREEDOM CAME

The author of the verses below is a member of the Negro race and writes from experience. The entire poem is entitled "The Other Fellow's Burden." We give the conclusion of it.

By W. Allison Sweeney

Penniless when freedom came? Most true;
But his accumulations of fifty years
Could finance a group of principalities.

Homeless? Yes; but the cabin and the hut
Of Lincoln's day—uncover at that name!—
Are memories; the mansion of to-day,
Dowered with culture and refinement,
Sweetened by clean lives,
Is a fact.

Unlettered? Yes;
But the alumni of his schools,
Triumphant over the handicap
Of "previous condition,"
Are to be found the world over
In every assemblage inspired
By the democracy of letters.

In the casting up what appears?
The progeny of lust and helplessness,
He inherited a mottled soul—
"Damned spots" that biased the looker on.

Clothed a freeman,
Turned loose in the land
Creditless, without experience,
He often stumbled, the way being strange,
Sometimes fell.

Mocked, sneered at from every angle,
Spurned, hindered in every section,
North, south, east, west,
Refused the most primitive rights,
His slightest mistakes
Made mountains of,
Hunted, burned, hanged;
The death rattle in his throat
Drowned by shouts and laughter
And—think of it!—
The glee of little children,
Still he pressed on, wrought,
Sowed, reaped, builded.

His smile ever ready,
His perplexed soul lighted
With the radiance
Of an unquenchable optimism,
God's presence visualized.

He has risen, step by step,
To the majesty of the home builder,
Useful citizen,
Student, teacher,
Unwavering patriot.
This of the Other Fellow.
What of you, his judges and his patrons?

If it has been your wont
In your treatment of him
Not to reflect,
Or to stand by in idle unconcern
While, panting on his belly,
Ambushed by booted ruffianism,
He lapped in sublime resignation
The bitter waters
Of unreasoning intolerance,
Has not the hour of his deliverance,
Of your escape from your "other selves,"
Struck?

If you have erred,
Will you refuse to know it?
Has not the time arrived
To discriminate between
Those who lower,
Those who raise him?

You are shamed by your abortions,
Your moral half growths
Who flee God's eye
And stain his green earth,
But you are not judged by yours;
Should he be judged by his?

In his special case—if so, why?—
Is manhood a myth,
Womanhood a toy,
Integrity unbelievable,
Honor a chimera?

Should not his boys and girls,
Mastering the curriculum of the schools,
Pricked on to attainment by the lure
Of honorable achievement,
Be given bread and not a stone
When seeking employment
In the labor mart,
At the factory gate
Or the office door?

Broadened by the spirit of the golden rule,
Will you not grant these children of Hagar
An even break?
Is the day not here, O judges,
When the Other Fellow
May be measured in fairness,
Just fairness?

It is written men may rise
"On their dead selves to higher things;"
But can it be that this clear note of cheer
To sodden men and smitten races
Was meant for all save him?

Chants an immortal:
"He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

THE GENIUS OF LINCOLN

In The Critic published in 1894 an article upon Abraham Lincoln classed him with half a dozen other immortals as "a transcendent genius." A comparison with Shakespeare may interest those who did not read it twenty years ago.

THE comparison with Shakespeare, in particular, is one which deserves to be urged as an instructive lesson, in literary criticism. Not a few writers of very considerable ability have been unable to comprehend how Shakespeare, with what they consider his small advantages of education and early training, could have acquired the affluence and graces of language and the knowledge of literature and social life apparent in his works. This seeming difficulty has led to the many attempts—which, however much ridiculed, are constantly repeated—to find some other authorship for his productions. And yet the apparent difficulty of explanation is decidedly greater in Lincoln's case. Shakespeare's early opportunities were far beyond those of the Western plough boy and wood-chopper. Shakespeare's father was at the time of his son's birth, and for many years afterwards, until he suffered financial reverses, a citizen of good standing and substance, who had held many civic offices of note, including those of high bailiff and chief alderman of Stratford. His wife, the poet's mother, Mary Arden, belonged to an ancient family of Warwickshire gentry, and had brought her husband a landed estate of considerable value. With this dower, we cannot doubt, she had brought another, of which the benefit shines throughout her son's works—the breeding and accomplishments of her class. The son, as we learn on the unquestionable authority of Ben Jonson, had gained some knowledge, however small, of Latin and even Greek; and we may reasonably feel sure that his school attainments in other directions had been much larger. Of Lincoln, we know that at the time of his birth, and through the whole of his early life, his parents lived in a condition of the most abject poverty. His father, a Kentucky frontiersman, certainly of reputable descent, but reduced by his own incorrigibly lazy and thriftless habits to the humblest rank of the Southern "poor white," wandered aimlessly through the States of Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois, leading everywhere the same idle and profitless existence. His son's schooling, gained at odd times and under every disadvantage, covered less than a year of study. Lincoln himself has left on record that at the age of twenty-one he could "read and write, and cipher to the rule of three, and that was all." Yet with this scanty educational furnishing he was able to make himself, by his own unaided efforts, first, at the age of twenty-three—by his earliest published political address—a writer of pure and forcible English; secondly, a year or two later, a capable and successful surveyor; then a lawyer of large practice and high reputation; and finally an orator and statesman of world-wide renown, whose speeches and statepapers display an extent of varied learning and a knowledge of men and life as great as those which astonish us in the plays of Shakespeare.

Continuing and extending our comparison, it may be observed that the eight modern examples of supreme genius in Europe and America fall naturally into three classes. The first class, comprising three of the eight examples, consists of those whose eminence was wholly or chiefly in literature—namely, Dante, Shakespeare, and Goethe. The second class comprehends the examples of pre-eminent political genius, the born leaders of men, who were also three, Cromwell, Napoleon, and Washington. The third, and that which, as combining these distinct elements of greatness, must be deemed the highest of all, comprised but two examples—Luther, who shaped the modern German language and the Reformed Religion, and Lincoln, whose eloquence stirred the people of a vast country to an enthusiasm of self-sacrifice, and whose statesmanship set free four millions of slaves. Of the statesmanship there is no question, nor the possession of extraordinary literary endowments, in a degree which has hardly yet been fully recognized. The comparison with Shakespeare is again irresistibly suggested. Like him, Lincoln may be said to have had three periods of intellectual development. The first was when the consciousness of power was felt, but this power was not yet fully disciplined, and youthful spirits were unrestrained. To this period belong, for Shakespeare, his earlier comedies, including "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and "All's Well that Ends Well," where delicate poetical fancies alternate with the most riotous humor; and for Lincoln, among other efforts, his remarkable speech in the Congress of 1848, where he first confounds his opponents with unanswerable facts and logic, and then suddenly overwhelms them with a laughter-moving broadside of ridicule and sarcasm. Shakespeare's middle period, which produced his historical plays and leading comedies, finds its parallel in the series of Lincoln's notable speeches evoked by his famous argumentative contest with Douglas, which formed the turning-point of his career. Shakespeare's great tragedies, which belonged to the last decade of his literary labors, may be fitly correlated with the addresses, presidential messages, and other state-papers, which distinguished the last five years of Lincoln's life. The first, and in some respects the most memorable, of these was the address delivered at the Cooper Institute in 1860. This address deserves careful study as a mere literary exercise, a light in which its author certainly never regarded it. In the transparent clearness of statement, in the convincing array of historical evidence, in cogency of reasoning, in elevation of sentiment, in the force of its appeals both to opponents and to friends, and in the inspiring fervor of its brief peroration, it is unsurpassed in ancient or modern eloquence. As its effect was to make its author President, and to enable him to accomplish all that he afterwards achieved, it may be pronounced the most important oration that was ever delivered. The proper pendants, from a literary point of view, are his brief but even more famous Gettysburg address—an effort certainly never surpassed and perhaps never equalled by any public speaker,—and his last Inaugural Address, which, in its tone of mournful triumph and solemn pathos, seemed fitly to herald the swiftly approaching tragic close of his noble life.

Returning to the comparison with his only rival in both departments of excellence, it is proper to bear in mind that Luther had at the outset the immense advantage of a well-ordered though humble home and a complete scholastic education. And if in general capacity, as well as in eminent virtues and achievements, the great German was in all respects but one the peer of the great American, it is still true that he failed to equal him in one faculty of no small importance for a leader of men—that of judicious self-restraint in speech and action. On the whole, it may be affirmed that America can justly claim the honor of having produced, in Abraham Lincoln, the grandest example of combined literary and political genius that the world has known since the Christian era.

WHAT IS THE OUTLOOK FOR THE NEGRO IN THIS COUNTRY?

The South Western Christian Advocate, published in New Orleans and edited by Dr. Robert E. Jones—one of the ablest representatives of the colored people—in a recent issue has a significant symposium upon the "Outlook of the Negro in this Country." Most of the articles are from educated colored men, from various Southern states who have frankly expressed their views of the present situation and the future hope. The race question is the most serious question before the American people in its possibilities and in its dangers. Ten millions of people—chiefly in the South—were with the rest of the nation promised a New Freedom, but as Oswald Garrison Villard has said, "the apostles of reaction, the Vardamans, Tillmans, Hoke Smiths and all the rest of the Negro-baiting crowd who have risen to eminence on the back of the Negro, defaming and oppressing him on the way, are urging a new slavery." He claims that these and the Cabinet officers and Congressmen, and officers of Federal Executive departments misrepresent the heart and conscience of the true South.

We give a few samples of this symposium:

OUTLOOK FOR EQUAL OPPORTUNITIES REMOTE

Rev. A. F. Beard, D.D.

In the fifty years since emancipation the Negro race has made wonderful strides. It has already a class which measures well up in standards of intellectual attainment and in other values with the same class of other peoples. In proving its possibilities the race merits the recognition of its values and its rights on the part of all who would be just. The race has the right to possess its rights of equal citizenship and equal opportunities of life in every respect, but the outlook for this seems to me remote.

Just now the Government in power for the first time has thrown its positive influence against manhood rights. This has given courage and new resolution to those who have heretofore denied them and is an intentional setback to hopeful onward recognition of the progress and the rights of the race. Appreciating—as I do—the many in the South who are friendly to all the progress which the Negro can make in any direction, and who would be glad to help it on and to recognize the full rights of man, it still remains that the dominant influence of the South not only hinders and handicaps the Negro and opposes his just recognition as a man and as a citizen, but it proposes with more determination than ever to close this door of hope wherever and whenever it can. The greatly dominant South proposes a subject race and no man avowing himself openly in favor of what the Negro has full constitutional and manhood rights to claim could be elected to either house of Congress or could be Governor of any Southern state. The road to political power is too evident. The immediate outlook for the recognition of the full rights of the race may be inferred from these facts. Nor does it help my optimism to be told that the Negro people will be treated kindly when they accept this submission, or that there are not quite so many murdered this year as there were the year before.

But there is an outlook that is full of hope. It is the outlook of a true prophecy which began when the schools were planted for the Negro which should lead up to the highest attainment possible for all who could prove their capacity for that which is high. This vision of a developing people was and is the true outlook. To educate a people to long for and to attain their highest possibilities settles the question for the future. What was made a certainty in the beginning makes going back impossible. The race will press on. It will not accept anything less than a full orbed manhood and womanhood. It will not be silent and it will be heard. We may not now tell when the Negro people and their wrongs will part company, but over all oppositions and hindrances the evolution will go on. The possibilities will be worked out. The very struggles may prove to be God's permission for growth—for accumulated strength—for an increase of power that shall prove to be a permanent race possession. At all events enough has been achieved to give us a pledge of God's purpose that this people shall be truly and fully free to possess and enjoy whatever are the rights of man. Opposing wills may temporarily hinder, but the chariot wheels of God will not turn backward. As to time we may be sure that it will move on as Christianity does. To the degree that we believe in God and work His will, we shall be in the current of a Providence that is stronger than the purposes of opposing men, and we may work for and face the outlook without fear.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Dr. Booker T. Washington.

After fifty years of freedom it may well be asked what is the outlook for the Negro in this country. In my opinion the outlook for him is bright. There are, of course, many difficulties, discouragements and hindrances that we as a race meet.

They are, however, tests of our ability to get on and overcome obstacles. They are our stepping-stones to success. Nowhere has a body of black people better opportunities for making progress than have the ten million Negroes in this country. We are a part of one of the most progressive nations of the world and the majority of us live in that part of this nation which, in the next half century, is destined to have the greatest development. As I see it, there is more and more of a disposition on the part of the white people in the South to give the Negro a man's chance. More friendly relations are growing up between the best whites and the best Negroes. The South is taking a greater interest in the education of the Negro and in his general uplift, for she is realizing more and more, that her progress and development is bound up with the progress and development of the Negro.

STRUGGLE

By Prof. William Pickens, Talladega College.

"What is the outlook for the Negro in this country?"

Indeed, it is not an inviting avocation to play the role of prophet,—for like Cassandra, the ill-fated daughter of Priam, a prophet among his own people is in danger of being considered non compos mentis.

Of all subjects, the American Negro is the most difficult and disappointing to the prophets. What prophet of 1853 would have predicted that with 60 years there would be an influential Negro journal in New Orleans, and that its able editor should be gathering a "symposium" on the future of his race from intelligent members of the same—some of whom in intellect and character would not discredit any race? Indeed such a prophet should have been stoned to death.

Through faith we can see the ultimate future more or less clearly, but the immediate future is always foggy. And yet there is one consistent answer which this immediate future reiterates to our anxious investigation, and that answer is struggle. There is struggle before us—the immediate necessity of solidarity and struggle—or death. We are being thrown more and more on our own resources, and the end is not yet.

America is going to learn, or to put it right, the Negro is going to teach America, that it cannot continue happy if he is miserable, that it cannot be free if he is oppressed, that it cannot be civilized if he is imbruted.

America has not learned this yet. To teach her we must fight a good fight. I do not mean brute fights, although they shall be forced upon us, many times individually and sometimes collectively; and they should be done with the same courage and consistency that should characterize the other phases of the great struggle.

We must carefully keep our forces lined up on the side of the Eternal God, and we must fight with all our resources—for our fight is for life, moral, intellectual and physical. If we turn in the fight we are lost, and it is only because I think the Negro capable of fighting such a fight that I can think for one moment we will win!

HE MUST DEFEAT CASTE

By Dr. J. E. Moorland, International Secretary Young Men's Christian Association, Colored.

In many ways the most critical time of the Negro's existence in America is now. Increasing every day, more and more, by his own strength, he is to carve out his place as a free man and a citizen. He must defeat caste. He is being helped in this through educational, religious and material forces common to the nation. On the other hand a narrow prejudice against him is taking on new forms as evidenced by segregation methods in different parts of the country. What is termed education by many good people is depended upon to settle a vexed problem. There is danger that it may work both ways—lifting colored people a little in the estimation of the public and lowering colored people in the estimation of themselves. Principles are too often obscured by class opportunism in both church and state.

Everything against the Negro is against mankind. The future affords the Negro a chance to defend and uphold the principles of universal human brotherhood in the state and Divine kinship in the church. Our battle is for the rights and duties of man and not ourselves alone. We work and struggle as men, not merely a class. We are daily making the burden easier for mankind throughout the world or heaping new burdens on innocent backs. That those who seek to oppress and hinder us may be free, we contend for justice. The bigness of the outlook lends inspiration to noble souls.

TWO VIEWS

By J. Beverly F. Shaw, Ph.D.

On this subject I am a sort of dual personality, a kind of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. For this I must be excused; for to be hopeful and optimistic as to the future of the Negro in this country with so many things against such hope, with proscription and discrimination against him, taking root in the very government of the nation under whose banner we are born and for whose flag we fight, requires the vision of a prophet and patience and forbearance almost superhuman. Following the torchlight of intelligence held before him by the white man, the Negro keeps advancing and demanding, the white man does not yield. The Negro continues to gain in wealth, culture, character, and self-respect; the white man refuses to accord him such recognition as these attainments warrant. Hence in my sadder moments the Negro's condition suggests the old question of what would happen if an irresistible force should strike an immovable body, the answer of which would seem to suggest General Sherman's definition of war. This is my sadder moments. But when I reflect that there is a God in the Universe, who rules in the affairs of men, I take courage and believe that He will either lead the Negro out of America or help him to some manhood future in America. Since the former seems impossible the latter seems probable.

RADIANT IN SPITE OF DISCOURAGEMENTS

By J. C. Napier, Attorney and Counsellor, Former Register of the Treasury.

Although as an individual I often feel depressed and cast down at incidents and occurrences that weigh heavily upon the colored people, I never at any time feel content to enroll my name among the pessimists or those who have no hope for the Negroes' future in this country. While conditions are by no means what we would like to have them, all of us admit that the betterment within the life-time of many has been so great that when seen from certain view-points, it is gratifying, encouraging and satisfactory. If we should honestly ask and answer certain questions and then have our own thoughts and conclusions laid bare before us there would doubtless be reason for far less complaint and discouragement than we often hear. Suppose, for instance, we ask: Where did the Negro start? How did he start? Where has he gone? What has he done? A candid answer to these inquiries will go far towards convincing all whether his future is discouraging or hopeful.

CHRISTMAS AT JOPPA NORMAL INSTITUTE, (WHITE), ALA.

Ivy Leitch Brown

CHRISTMAS has come and gone, the best Christmas that this school has seen, I think. Our Christmas tree was so big and friends in the north were so generous that we were able to remember every little child in the school and community, also every mother for miles around. It was such a joy to get things ready, and when the Christmas barrels came there was great excitement. When we were unpacking them the students took every pretext imaginable to see what was going on.

Neighbors in all directions offered help because they said the work was hard and they knew we were tired, (no one however ever appears on wash days!) One man insisted on repairing a telephone which was in the room where we were working although it had needed attention for more than a year. One boy played off sick from school, found a key that fitted the door lock and was just beginning to have a delightful time "seein' things" when we found him. People came and peeked in the windows, through the keyhole and the cracks of the doors. I was too busy to go to dinner one day and every boy in the boarding department offered to take up my dinner in the hope of seeing something, and great was the disgust when I met the selected boy outside the door and took the tray. We had to lock every window and nail one, as well as put a padlock on the door. I never saw such curiosity in my life. The excitement over the tree was also intense. When we sent the baskets of presents from the house to the school building, a breathless mob of small children followed. When it was over the youngsters ran down the street like young deer; now and then a stocking of candy would drop and there would be a mad scramble to pick up the contents, and every few steps some one would stop to compare gifts with some one else. Two half-grown boys got knives. I overheard this conversation. "Say, I got a knife, what'd you-all git? This here knife is worth $1.50 or nothin'." The other boy replied, "Well, I'm sartinly right smart proud of mine; saw some at the store not half as good for a dollar; wasn't it the best Christmas doin's ye ever saw?" One of these boys—a boarding student,—walked in 20 miles one Sunday and begged us to give him a chance to work his way. He is a splendid worker too, but we may have to let him go because we are personally bearing the expense of feeding him. If some church or friend would stand good for his board money, $8.00 a month, it would be a splendid investment, for the boy will certainly make good if he only gets a chance. He says he never received a gift before, as he puts it he "never had a 'Santa Claus'" before. All the hard work, soliciting the gifts, unpacking and getting them ready for the tree is forgotten when you see the happy faces. The gift of an apron to an old lady; a calendar to a lonely man whose wife is in the insane asylum; toys for two small boys whose father was murdered; dolls to the children of a poor widow; handkerchiefs enough to give one each to all the mothers, who are never remembered, are some of the incidents we shall always remember.

Christmas customs here may interest you. It is all so different from the north. There is always a great display of fire-works here at Christmas time as much as on Fourth of July, and much drinking. Almost every man in the community here imbibes at Christmas and many reeling forms were seen on the roads. Several of the best men in town caroused all one night in an old house near us. A still not far away gave notice every night to a favored few when to come for whiskey, by making a noise like a wildcat. A favorite custom is serenading, going in crowds to different houses with mouth organs, guitars, banjos, etc., and singing. Another is what is called fantastic riding. Boys go about on horseback dressed as clowns or wearing women's clothing or with as grotesque costumes as possible, thus attired they call on friends and expect refreshments. The funniest custom however is "dry sitting," where a crowd will come masked to your house and sit for an hour at a time without saying a word. An extract from a Christmas sermon delivered at Joppa, but not by the Principal will show you the necessity for this school.

"Joseph went to pay his taxes, though he probably did not have any property, I don't know how much he paid, the Bible just says that he paid them and that's more than some of you do. He went to Bethlehem but there was no room for he and Mary. They went from house to house, from hotel to hotel, and at last went to a livery stable, and got an ox stall. The Christ-child was born in a feed box where the cattle 'et.' They were too poor to buy clothes, so they 'wropped' the baby in 'swabbling clothes', these were old rags used to wipe the sweat from the cattle. When Christ was grown up a woman came once and poured an alabaster on his head. The box cost about $17, and she thought the alabaster would be good to anoint him with. After she poured the alabaster, she washed his feet with hot tears and wiped them with her long hairs."

I do not repeat the portion of this sermon to make fun of the preacher; he is an earnest man; but to show you the need of education here. We are trying to raise the salary of another teacher in our school from now until spring with money realized from the sale of barrel clothing. Can you not send us more of these barrels? We need them, they help us in our work more than you can realize. Address all barrels to J. W. Brown, Principal Joppa Post Office, Guntersville, Ala., freight office.

SANTA CLAUS AT FESSENDEN ACADEMY

SANTA CLAUS was good to the children at Fessenden Academy. He made his appearance the day before Christmas in true conventional garb. The children, all expectancy, watched for him in every direction, but suddenly he appeared on the campus from somewhere never known, and his good nature, his big bundles of toys and the roar of welcome at once banished all mystery or research. His fine voice and cheery sentences made old and young happy. It would have done you good to see the boys run to the barn and bring out the "big" red buggy and wheel it around close to Santa Claus who got in with the dignity of some great monarch, and a hundred little fellows pushed and pulled and followed and cheered the triumphant march to the school chapel where presents were given to all the students and teachers. Then came the Christmas songs and the speeches and the march.

As it is warm at Christmas in Florida they sported on the grass, and set off fireworks when suddenly there was a rush and all were scurrying around the buildings to meet a great parade of advanced scholars bearing Christmas banners and mottoes. Santa Claus disappeared in the crowd and the little ones thought he must have disappeared in the mysterious balmy air that seems so good and so much like himself. Here is a picture of him. He made a neat little speech after giving out presents, saying, "Children, always be good and true and keep your hearts right. It is the only way to be happy. You have heard of Ferdinand Fessenden; this great school is named after him, and your cute little hamlet here also named for him. He was like Christ in that he was good and true and kind. Children, try to be like him. Be kind to everybody and to all of God's creatures; be good to the little pets you have. Remember Fessenden—our Founder—and be like him and make folks happy and lift folks up. That is what he did. Mr. Fessenden was a real Santa Claus to the little boys of Fessenden. He has made them better. He lives in his gifts to you and his lessons will ever improve you if you will practice them."

OBITUARY

Miss Elizabeth Nye Webb passed away on Thursday, December 4, 1913. Miss Webb was a teacher in Lincoln Normal Institute at Marion, Alabama, and was there completing her third year when she was stricken with pneumonia which ended in her death. Miss Webb was greatly loved by her pupils and was most successful as an instructor. Her bright, cheerful disposition and her helpfulness in the teachers' home will long be remembered.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH BUILDING SOCIETY

Office: 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Corresponding Secretary, Charles H. Richards, D.D.; Treasurer, Charles E. Hope; Field Secretaries, William W. Newell, D.D., 19 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.; William W. Leete, D.D., Room 611, Congregational House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. H. H. Wikoff, 417 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.; Assistant Field Secretaries, Mrs. C. H. Taintor, Clinton, Conn., and Rev. J. P. Sanderson, D.D., Chicago.

December was a record breaking month in The Church Building Society for receipts. There came into our Treasury from all the various sources more than $67,000 in the last month of 1913. This is one of the largest, if not the largest amount received in any December of our history.

The receipts of the entire year make a total of more than $291,000. Legacy receipts, however, were more than $34,000 less than those which came from bequests in 1912. Had the legacies been as large as the previous year, our total receipts would have exceeded the receipts of 1912.

The Second Church, Oberlin, by a postal card vote of women who are voting members of the church and resident in Oberlin, voted 100 "yes," 33 "no" and 16 "no choice" that women remove their hats in church. This is an excellent step forward. Any man who sits behind one of the modern hats with its amplitude of feathers would be glad to vote "yes" on such a proposition.

Our Annual Meeting was held on Jan. 29th in the North New York Congregational Church, Rev. William H. Kephart, D.D. pastor, and was a delightful occasion.

President Lucien C. Warner, L.L.D., was in the chair.

The devotional service in the afternoon was conducted by the Rev. Albert E. Roraback of the Church of the Evangel, Brooklyn, on the topic "The Secret of Power." In the evening the devotional service was led by Rev. Charles F. Taylor of Greenwich, Conn., his theme being "Christ as a Church Builder."

The reports for 1913 were presented by Secretary Richards and Treasurer Hope.

The Society adopted the revision of the By-Laws which had been made necessary by the new plans of the National Council, and the officers for the ensuing year were elected.

Addresses of great interest were given by Rev. W. W. Leete, D.D., of Boston, on "What I Saw in the Southwest"; Rev. C. W. Shelton, D.D., of New York, on "Saving the City"; Mrs. Hastings H. Hart of White Plains, N. Y. (President of the Woman's Federation of Home Missionary Unions), on "Woman's Part in Making a Christian Nation"; Rev. Harry R. Miles of New Haven, Conn., on "What the Church Building Society is doing on the Pacific Coast," and by Rev. W. W. Newell, D.D., of Chicago, on "Church Efficiency."

The dinner for the delegates and guests of the Society was as usual an occasion of delightful fellowship.

In the evening Mrs. Hastings H. Hart of White Plains, N. Y. (President of the Woman's Federation of Home Missionary Unions), gave an address on "Woman's Part in Making a Christian Republic," and the final address was given by the Rev. H. H. Wikoff of San Francisco, on "Pilgrim Progress West of the Rockies." This was very delightfully illustrated by stereopticon pictures.

Our docket of applications is simply tremendous. One hundred and eighteen churches are asking for grants and loans amounting to about $300,000. While our receipts are larger than ever before (aside from legacies) much of the money is not available for appropriation, and many of these cases must wait many months before they can be reached for consideration by our Board. If the churches would send us their full apportionment, we could vote every one of these grants asked for; and if the churches would pay up their over-due loans, we could vote about two-thirds of the loans asked for. It is the delinquent churches which are keeping their needy and struggling sister-churches in distress. Doubtless they do not realize this. We think many of them will this year come to the rescue of these suffering churches by sending to our treasury all that is due at once.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, CHULA VISTA, CALIFORNIA

IS THIS IN AMERICA OR AFRICA?

Miss Olive G. Gibson

OLD Maria was the village witch,—no doubt about it in the minds of most of her fellow-townsmen. And she did look it, every inch, even to the skeptically inclined. In the first place she looked as old as the pyramids of Egypt. She was old too, so old that no one knew just how old she really was. There was nothing left of her but bones covered with a wrinkled old skin, tanned by the desert winds, tobacco-cured and kissed by the semi-tropical sun for most of a century, till it resembled parchment. She was the possessor of one single tooth, so long that it really was a tusk. It happened to be in the lower jaw and hooked up over the left side of the upper lip, adding the one finishing touch to complete her terrifying aspect. She lived all alone in her little mud hut, unmolested by the public and treated respectfully by all; since it was claimed that she possessed the malignant power to give "the evil-eye" to those she disliked.

It was claimed, too, by good authority, that through the day she was confined to her bed but at night she could turn into a dog or a cat or an owl and go around over the country tormenting her enemies, and seeking those upon whom she might cast the spell, thus it was but the part of wisdom to keep on the good side of "Old Mary, the witch." It was also claimed that any one succeeding in killing the dog, or cat or owl (Old Mary in disguise) would benefit the country by ridding it of the evil influence of Her Satanic Highness.

One beautiful Spring evening the mission teacher of that town was passing along the street near Old Maria's home when to her amazement one of the most intelligent women of the town came running out of her house and began throwing stones and sticks up into a tall cotton wood tree, and scolding as fast as her tongue could move. The teacher said.

"Dona Juanita, what are you stoning, and whom are you scolding?"

Dona Juanita replied,

"Old Maria, the witch. Don't you see her sitting up there in the tree? She thinks I don't know her but I do very well, I know her by that scar on the side of her head. You come down out of that tree, you old —! I know you very well. You think I'm afraid of you, but I am not!" It was, in reality, a poor old hooting owl "so unacquainted with man, its tameness was shocking to me."

This much of the story of old Maria we know to be a fact, she was sick in bed. One evening after the day's work was over in the school room the teacher went to see the old soul. The door of the house was so low that the teacher had to stoop to enter the room, where she found old Maria lying in one corner on the floor. The only furniture was a broken chair. The teacher sat down by old Maria's head on the floor. She asked, "What have you to eat?" Old Maria said, "Some chile" (red pepper). An investigation proved that there was nothing in the house to eat. The teacher went home and prepared a hot supper for her and took it to Old Maria.

Old Maria was bad, no doubt about it. She never had a chance to be any thing else but bad, she had never lived in a place where there was a school or a church till she was an old woman, though born under the United States flag. There was another reason for her depravity, which one hesitates to mention, she lived, when a girl, near the United States Barracks.

But there was still some good in her, though almost starving she shared her supper till the last bite with her hungry cat.

After she had finished eating, the mission teacher took her Spanish Bible out of her pocket and began to read to Maria. At first she did not seem to understand but after a little she said.

"Teacher, please say those words slowly so I can say them after you."

They read together till it grew dark in the room. Maria said, "What is that book? Isn't it beautiful?" Then they prayed together, Maria saying the words after the teacher. Ever after that when that teacher met old Maria she always asked the teacher to pray with her.

But old Maria, in spite of her desire to be good made an awful fizzle of the attempt.

Deceit and treachery had become second nature with her. The mission property had an apple tree at the side of the house, old Maria fastened a stocking inside of her skirt, then she made a hole through the skirt into the stocking, she then covered herself with a shawl and went to sit in the shade of the apple tree. When she thought no one was looking she would pluck the apples from the tree and fill the stocking. If the teacher went out before the stocking was full old Maria would ask for a "prayer." When that teacher left the village old Maria put her bony old arms around the teacher's neck and said.

"Give my love to all your people, then, give my love to all those good people who are supporting our school, for since we have the school our children do not have to grow up as ignorant as dogs and burros,—like me."

This was seven years ago; old Maria has passed away, maybe to a higher development. It was not what she was but what she may be, say a million years from now.

We are told of another witch, who is said to be the most powerfully malignant and virulent witch in the South-west. She is said to travel through the air in a pumpkin. She can travel hundreds of miles in a night and be back home before breakfast.

The man who tells about her says he watched her through a hole in the wall. And he knows the story is true. One night he watched her making cigarettes. She was making them to sell. She made a great quantity and put them on a tray and then she danced around them and they all became alive and danced on the tray. She then took down a bag that was hanging on the wall and emptied it on the floor. It was full of dried snakes and toads, lizzards, rats, mice and frogs. She then sprinkled them with a queer looking powder and danced around them and they all became alive and started out to give people the "evil eye." Mark you, this was all seen by an eye witness. And in the presence of eye witnesses who can doubt?

In one of our school towns there is a witch who makes people sick all the time. One man, who was under her spell had a terrible pain in his stomach. Another had a pain in his head, still another had a pain in his neck, and one had a bad foot; there is no end to the suffering she caused. One day when she was away from her home some boys broke into her house and found a big box of rag dolls, a doll resembling each person that was sick. The doll that looked like the man with the pain in his stomach had a big wooden peg stuck into its stomach. The doll that looked like the man with the pain in his head had a wooden peg stuck into its head, and so on. It was very clearly seen just where and how she had afflicted each sick person in the town.

One day a strange dog was on the street of that town, the boys hit it with a stone and the next day the old witch was lame,—couldn't walk. Any one with the sense of a rabbit can see through that.

Near our town is an old deserted estate, which was at one time the home of a very wealthy Mexican. Though it has fallen into decay it shows that it was at one time a magnificent place, of revelry and festivity. There were once five men killed in this house, the story runs that for six days the water of the brook flowing through the estate was turned to blood. At night, we are told, one may hear troops of soldiers riding around the place. Always at night a man comes out of the canon on a burro and rides around the house, the burro throws the man, breaking his neck, and that ends the escapading of the evil spirits till the next night.

MISSIONARY AND EXTENSION DEPARTMENT
Office: Congregational House, Boston, Mass.

Jackson Street, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, 289 Fourth Ave., New York, N. Y.; Educational Secretaries, For the Southwest, Rev. J. P. SHALL THERE BE A DEFICIT?

For many years the Sunday-School Society has not had a deficit. There has been a slow and steady increase of contributions year by year. The prairies have been populated; Indian Reservations have been settled; vast tracts of desert have been reclaimed; forests have been cleared for settlement; mining towns established. In all of these a frontier has called for the Sunday-School Society. Rural communities in the older states and great growing cities have added their appeal. An awakening of our Sunday-schools, large and small, has called for leadership and help to increase their members and improve their work. These have been open doors before the Sunday-School Society which, as far as possible, it has entered. If the amount recommended by the National Council and the Apportionment Commission is reached, the work can be maintained, and advanced to meet the most pressing needs. On account of a falling off in legacies there is anxiety lest there should be a deficit. The Society year closes February 28th. If $4,000 more were received from the living than now seems in sight, the year will be closed without debt. Will churches which have not met their apportionment try to do so before February 28th? Will men and women who are interested send an offering? An installment on the apportionment of 1914 will greatly help.

WORDS FROM LORD BRYCE.

The late ambassador from Great Britain to the United States in advocating moral and religious training said: "It is with great regret that one sees in these days that knowledge of the Bible seems declining in all classes of the community. I was struck with the same thing in the United States. Looking at it from only the educational side, the loss of a knowledge of the Bible and of all that the Bible means would be incalculable to the life of the country. It would be a great misfortune to the country if generations of children grew up who did not know their Bible."

The Sunday-School Society is earnestly striving to give the study of the Bible its rightful place in the home, Sunday-school, college and church.

A WELCOME BACK.

Rev. E. J. Singer, for a number of years the successful superintendent of the Sunday-School Society for Northern California, has again entered the service and is pushing forward the work successfully with all his old-time enthusiasm.

A TOWN WITHOUT A CHURCH

By Rev. H. A. Deck, Supt. for Arizona and New Mexico.

When ground was broken on the sixth day of July, 1911, Hurley, N. M., was an insignificant station on the Santa Fe Railroad. The present townsite until that time was a favorite spot for the semi-annual roundup. cided that something must be done and the Congregational church has been formed. The membership is composed of Baptists, Episcopalians, Catholics, Disciples, Methodist Episcopalians, Methodist Episcopal South, a Mormon, Presbyterians and Congregationalists, about 60 in all. The spirit of the Master has predominated throughout. This means an important advance in Christian work.

A TOWN WITHOUT A CHURCH, HURLEY, NEW MEXICO

The town is now well laid out with wide streets, many of which bear historic names, such as Cortez, Santa Rita, Romero, and others familiar in Spanish history.

The homes of the employees of the mill are commodious, well built and neatly painted, lighted with electricity and supplied with water. Each cottage occupies the center of a lot. One is impressed with the cleanliness and orderliness of the town, that is, the part where the English speaking people live. In the Mexican part neatness and cleanliness are not in evidence. The entire population is about 2,000, and two-thirds of these are Spanish-speaking.

There is no church building. The schoolhouse has served thus far for Sunday-school and religious gatherings. Occasionally some minister of a neighboring town would drop in and preach, but no regular services except the Sunday-school were held. A number of the Christian people de-

LABORERS NEEDED IN ARIZONA

By Rev. A. L. Seward, Missionary in Arizona.

I am happy to mention the brightening prospects. The Humboldt mill and smelter are doubling their capacity for handling ore. They have taken on 50 men within the last two weeks. Eight young men were out to our services Sunday evening and joined us in the service of song. We have planned to open a reading room. A literary society meets biweekly at the schoolhouse. We are trying to maintain something better than the saloon and dance hall. Mrs. Seward has secured 86 signers of a temperance pledge, 36 from Humboldt.

Our Sunday-schools are suffering in some places for lack of leadership. Crown King, I am sorry to hear, has suspended their school for a season. Most of the standbys have left for a time at least. The Superintendent concluded it was best to suspend until his supporters returned in February. I have not been able to be there for a Sunday as the train makes but two trips a week, and I was informed that there would be no place for me to room without going to a saloon. I have not visited them for about two months, except to go up and back the same day. I expect, however, to go before long and help them to get under way. I think I can find a place where I can roll up in a blanket. They are getting ready to open up a new mine, and we expect better days.

Henrietta is a new and promising town that I expect to visit soon. The harvest is great and the laborers few. We rejoice, however, that the work is in the Lord's hands and nothing is too hard for Him. We realize that our part is to be faithful to the work assigned and maybe our prayer for more laborers will be answered.

FRONTIER EXPERIENCES

By Rev. W. L. Sutherland, Northern Minnesota.

I have had some experiences recently in a frontier town in the woods. A snowfall tempted two neighbors to hunt for deer. In half an hour one came back with the sad news that he had mistaken his neighbor for a deer. The poor man died a few hours later. In consequence our service was interfered with and only nine were present. After the sermon two men came in, and as the service closed three Swedish men, two women and two babies. They had come from homesteads, three miles away. I told the early comers they could go and I would preach to the late comers. All stayed, however, and I gave them a second sermon.

Two weeks later, in the same hall, a much larger congregation gathered. Some came willingly, others were brought by force. The meeting place was the townhall, used for Saturday night dances, farmers' clubs, church and Sunday-school services; but the most frequent use is for the imprisonment of drunken men, and their trial after they have sobered off. The "cooler" is separated by a partition which is not noiseproof. When I went to the hall there were most fierce and grotesque threats and curses pouring from the locker. Presently in came the biggest policeman I ever saw, pushing along another man, and after a little two more prisoners arrived. Soon the people began to gather for church. The noise in the cells continued. I asked the people to pay no attention and they seemed to take it as a matter of course. During our service another victim was brought in. These poor fellows come from the lumber camps. They drink heavily until they have spent their all. Often a hundred dollars will last only one or two days. Many become violent and are arrested. If they have any money left, they are fined. They sometimes go to the hotel and pay for lodgings before going to the saloon, or give a little money to some trusty person. But generally after a few days they are pushed out of saloons or court, without a cent, to find their way back to camp as best they can, too often to repeat the process, unless rescued from their terrible course.

AMERICANIZED SCANDINAVIANS

By Rev. C. M. Daley, Montana.

Forty people greeted me Sunday morning on my first visit to the new Wiseman Schoolhouse, on the flat five miles from the new town of Limington. At the close of the preaching service we organized a Sunday-school. The people are mostly Scandinavians, but of American type and are interested in English-speaking services. At the close of the organization it was decided to have a Christmas tree and committees were named. We expect the work to be united with that at Limington.

THE CONGREGATIONAL BOARD OF MINISTERIAL RELIEF

Office: 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.

Henry A. Stimson, D.D., President; William A. Rice, D.D., Secretary; B. H. Fancher, Treasurer.

A COMPARATIVE STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS

FOR THE TWELVE MONTHS OF 1912 AND 1913

	Churches	Individuals	Affl. Soc.	Interest	Legacies	Totals
1912.....	$14,712.87	$5,636.59	$5,913.50	$10,981.97	$15,400.00	$52,644.93
1913.....	15,989.55	9,472.82	5,663.03	12,345.19	5,383.87	48,854.46
Gain.....	$1,276.68	$3,836.23	.....	$1,363.22	.....	.....
Loss.....	.....	.....	$250.47	.....	$10,016.13	$3,790.47

The above statement comparing the receipts from the sources indicated for the calendar year of 1913, which is also the fiscal year of the Board, shows a loss of $3,790.47. It is encouraging, however, to note the gain in receipts from churches and individuals, and also in interest. The loss from affiliated societies is small. The great deficiency is in legacies, being over $10,000. On the whole the report is encouraging. If we should add to the receipts for 1913 the Conditional Gifts of $1,600, our receipts would be $50,454.46. There were paid to the pensioners during the year the largest sum in the history of the Board for any one year, namely, $30,550.73.

THE CHRISTMAS FUND

THE Christmas Fund was the best ever, and rebuked our lack of faith in doubting if it would reach $2,000. It amounted to $2,206.42. We thank all the givers in behalf of the Board, but especially in behalf of the pensioners scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf, who were comforted and rejoiced by the Christmas checks.

We quote from one letter, which may stand for all, as expressing the need and the blessing:

"There is no use for me to attempt to express to you our sincere gratitude for the most liberal Christmas gift received. We can only say, 'Thank you and thank God for you and the dear friends who make such gifts possible.' This gift came at a time of special need. We were shivering around a little cook stove, trying to make it serve for a heater through this zero weather, our old heater being worn out. Now we have a good heater, though second hand, and are quite comfortable. Only one in sickness such as mine, I think, can appreciate what this comfort means. Oh, how I wish all the good servants of the Lord who make these gifts to their weaker brethren might understand the full value of their munificence."

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION IN UTAH

ABSTRACTS FROM A PAPER READ AT THE ANNUAL MEETING BY MISS STELLA M. JORDAN

From the colonization of New England, the American people have recognized the duty of making provision for the education of the children and young people. Not so, Utah.

In 1864 reports from Gentiles who had settled beyond the Rocky Mountains stated that the Mormon people had greater need of missionary labor than any other people on the face of the earth.

To Congregationalists belongs the honor of opening the door for missionary service in this un-Christian and un-American community. Un-Christian, for plurality of Gods, plurality of Bibles, and plurality of wives are fundamental principles of the Mormon faith. Our Mormon friends assure us that such were the beliefs in the early days, but that they are not to-day. * * * In a late edition of a compendium of doctrine with the imprint of the church, and dated 1912, we find this statement: "If plural marriage be unlawful, then is the whole plan of salvation through the house of Israel a failure, and the entire fabric of Christianity without foundation." Does this sound as if polygamy were no longer a principle of the church? * * * The president of the church is living to-day in Salt Lake City with five wives unto whom eleven children have been born since the so-called manifesto of 1890. * * *

The state of Utah is not only an un-Christian but an un-American community—un-American because the Mormon church claims to be the Kingdom of God, divinely ordained and established here on earth. Every Mormon of good standing takes an oath of treason against our government, promising that he will pray and never cease to pray Almighty God to avenge the blood of the prophets (meaning Joseph and Hyrum Smith) on this nation, and that he will teach the same to his children and children's children unto the third and fourth generations. Am I not right then when I say that Utah is a hostile empire within our republic?

* * * Realizing that the hope of Utah, as of all states, lies in her young people, the Christian school has been considered the most effective weapon with which to combat this evil, and the Education Society, therefore, is the organ of our denomination which is most powerfully felt within the borders of this state. * * *

It was by no means easy for the Society to gain a foothold in this un-Christian and un-American community. It was impossible to secure buildings to be used for educational purposes, or even land on which to erect such buildings. In one strong Mormon community an apostate Mormon finally consented to purchase in his own name, later selling to the Society. Similar means were adopted in other communities.

It was soon understood that the missionaries had come to stay, and parents who were eager that their children should enjoy educational advantages permitted them to attend these Gentile schools, as they were and are called. The situation soon became alarming to church officials, who realized that, if the church would hold its young people, it must also educate them. A free school bill was passed, and public school buildings were then erected—schools public in name, but parochial in character. * * *

With the exception of Proctor Academy at Provo, our schools are all located in communities where they are the only influences not under the domination of the Mormon church. In the town of Heber where one of our schools is located, the population is ninety-seven per cent. Mormon, and in the town of Coalville, a single mission teacher ministers to the needs of eight hundred people. * * * All of these mission schools have graduated young people who, as teachers, nurses, professional and business men and women, have become influential throughout the state. * * *

On the day that the Education Society established its first school in the state, the perspective of Utah changed. While the Mormon hierarchy still figures very prominently in the foreground, and the Mormon people almost disappear in the background, the latter are pressing nearer to the picture plane, and the Mormon church and Mormon hierarchy will eventually so adjust themselves in the picture, we trust, that they shall vanish with the Christian church and Christian school in the centre of vision. * * * A new day for Utah has dawned and now is the psychological moment for increasing work, increasing fervency in prayer, and increasing gifts. With this threefold increase, the brilliancy of the dawn assures us of a glorious sunset—a Christian Utah, a Christian America, and a Christian World.

Scripture: Isa. 35.

Prayer for intelligent knowledge of conditions in New Mexico, among the people of our churches.

Hymn: Tune, Wilton or Dorrance.

Long the "Children of the Twilight,"
In the darkness of their race,
Eastward looking, have been watching
For their God "with shining face."
'Tis the twilight hour of morning,
Harbinger of sunshine bright.
See! the clearness of the dawning
Dissipates the shades of night.
Christian teachers, self-forgetting,
Gladly here their lot have cast;
And we hear the children crying;
"God remembers us, at last."
Comes the looked-for Montezuma?
Is it he upon his way?
No; it is the radiant Christ-Child
Bringing in the glorious day. (M. A. T.)
